

CONTENTS

---

13 Letters

14 Cover story: Interview with José Manuel Barroso
The president of the European Commission talks to Simon O'Connor about the challenges confronting Europe in 2007 and how to face them

18 Capital E
By Philip Stephens

20 A bolder Europe for a greener planet
The European Union is uniquely well placed to lead the world towards a low-carbon economy, argues David Miliband

23 Freeing up Europe's energy
Competition Commissioner Neelie Kroes is spoiling for a fight with the firms that she believes are denying consumers lower energy prices. David Gow reports

26 Another Angle
By Will Hutton

28 Sterling resistance
Five years on from the launch of euro notes and coins, Wolfgang Münchau asks whether the UK's decision not to adopt the single currency has been vindicated

33 Outside the Box
By Anand Menon

34 No rest please, we're British
Britain's battle to retain its opt-out from EU working-time rules has been an epic tale of backroom deals and multi-level diplomacy, writes George Parker

41 Russian Revelation
By Andrew Osborn

42

A tale of two cities

Brussels and Washington DC are the world's two capitals of international policymaking. John Parker considers what they have in common – and what divides them

45

American Pie

By Philip Gordon

46

Captain's Table

By John Chambers

47

Europe's crowded house

Stephen Castle reports on the difficulty of cutting an ever-growing college of commissioners down to size

51

Unity, diversity...probity?

Levels of corruption vary widely across Europe – and the Union has few powers to ensure member states clean up their acts, writes David Charter

54

Perspectives

By Zandria Pouncefort

55

Cost in translation

Nicola Smith asks whether the EU's commitment to multilingualism is key to its belief in honouring cultural diversity – or a waste of taxpayers' money

59

Euroville

By Geoff Meade

61

Straight Banana

The low-down on the high flyers

62

Top Ten...European blogs

Craig Winneker surfs us through ten gems of the European blogosphere

66

Jargon Alert

Hack your way through the EU's linguistic jungle